Writing

I often play a computer game, which is called Counter Strike. This is my favorite game. Counter strike has several game options, that is, modes. When you enter the game you can choose one or two teams: terrorists or counter terrorist (special forces). The task for a team of terrorists is to detonate a bomb in a certain place, of which there are usually two on balanced maps. The bomb is carried by one of the team players (bomber), but can be thrown to another player from his team. The task for counter terrorists is to defuse the bomb before it explodes. The game can also end if one team completely kills the other team without planting a bomb. All movements take place on basic accessible maps, there are ten in total. One of the first maps that was added to the game was "Dust 2". The aim of the game is to defeat the opposing team, increase rank and develop teamwork.

I would recommend this game to teenagers, because it helps develop reaction, strategic thinking and concentration. And just interesting.
